Why Hire a Personal Injury Attorney?

There are many reasons to hire a personal injury attorney. If you were injured as a result of someone's negligence, please consider the following.

First, a qualified personal injury attorney can explain and protect your legal rights. It is important to know your legal rights as soon after your accident as possible in order to recover a reasonable settlement. Who to sue, when to sue or whether it is better to settle than sue can all be explained by a qualified personal injury attorney.

Second, there are time limits in which a person has to file a lawsuit or they could be prevented from ever receiving compensation for their injuries. For example, in Wisconsin, there are time limits on when you can file a lawsuit against a municipality, county employee or state employee. Your failure to do so will prevent a recovery. An experienced personal injury attorney can make sure that you do not lose your rights.

Third, qualified personal injury attorneys are trained investigators. In some cases it is unclear as to who caused a person's injury and who is liable for the damages. A personal injury attorney can gather evidence and interview witnesses so they can bring the strongest case possible to court to obtain maximum compensation for your injuries.

Fourth, most qualified personal injury attorneys, if you have a good case, will take it on a contingency basis. This means that you do not pay the attorney an hourly fee regardless of the outcome. Of course, you may still be obligated to pay certain costs and expenses; however, they are generally much less costly than it would take to pay the attorney to litigate your case on an hourly basis.

What type of cases does an experienced personal injury attorney accept? Generally, personal injury attorneys represent victims of car accidents, medical malpractice, head and spinal injuries, birth defects, products liability, slip and fall cases and much more.

At Krueger & Hernandez SC, our personal injury group, headed by Attorney Mark L. Krueger, has extensive experience in all types of personal injury cases.
